

Antibiotics: A Double-Edged Sword

What we can make it

A twin cinema

Megan Sim Hui Ci
Ngee Ann Polytechnic
535 Clementi Rd, Singapore 599489

Antibiotics: A Double-Edged Sword

What we can make it

aiya	this type of antibiotic	medicine cannot anyhow don't eat	finish – you not sick already	still must eat	think for what? don't waste	the doctor effort la you think	he don't care one ah save	your immune system it	later kena attack again next time sick can	avoid the same bacterial infection use	same antibiotic
again?	also no use.
use	anyhow can cause people when you really "cmi"	to literally die. antibiotic resistance not	just important,	it's a pressing emergency you know one person only	get one mutated virus how	very easy to infect the whole world	you know?

Antibiotics: A Double-Edged Sword

What we can make it

Left Hand Side: Traditionalist dialogue aiya antibiotic don't eat you not sick already eat for what? don't waste you think save it next time can use again? use when you really "cmi" antibiotic resistance not important, you know one person only how to infect the whole world

Right Hand Side: Pseudo-scientific dialogue this type of medicine cannot anyhow finish – still must think the doctor effort la he don't care one ah your immune system later kena attack again avoid the same bacterial infection same antibiotic also no use. anyhow can cause people to literally die. just it's a pressing emergency, get one mutated virus very easy you know?

Together: Appropriate line of dialogue aiya this type of medicine cannot anyhow don't eat finish- you not sick already still must eat. think for what? don't waste the doctor effort la you think he don't care one ah save your immune system it later kena attack again next time sick can avoid the same bacterial infection use same antibiotic again? also no use use anyhow can cause people when you really "cmi" to literally die. antibiotic resistance not just important, it's a pressing emergency you know one person only get one mutated virus how very easy to infect the whole world you know?